V-J DAY 1 . . . V-J DAY 2—PEACE IN OUR DAY

On August 14, 1946, the world will look back on a year of freedom from global war. It has been a critical and dramatic year, in many senses more critical and dramatic than the horrendous years that preceded it. The United States, together with other nations, has spent the past twelve months struggling to set its feet back on the highway to peace and security. It cannot engage in this struggle without the deeply-etched reminiscences of the dark and bloody times that were encompassed by Pearl Harbor and Okinawa.

THERE WAS MORTAR FIRE on the black beaches of Iwo Jima, and death, for the Marine (left), his face plunged deep into the volcanic sand. This August, 1945, Iwo and many of its grim sister islands of the Pacific are the white beaches of the United States the sailor, soldier, or veteran can peer into the glow of his outdoor hearth (right), remembering, but alive and at home again.

Michigan, to get good government—and to keep it good. But before we get into the Michigan problem of law enforcement, let's have a look or two at the reason why the Michigan Commissioner was selected by MacArthur to travel to Japan. The story begins in 1917. The Michigan National Guard had been mustered into war time service. Michigan was left without internal police protection. The legislature, sensing the emergen-

of any county, dity, township or village, within the limits of their respective jurisdictions, for aid and assistance in the performance of any duty imposed by this act."

Refusal or neglect by a local official to co-operate with the state police in law enforcement would subject said officer, the legislature decreed, to removal from office on grounds of "misteasance".

Here is how the procedure actually works:

Not many years ago vice and gambling conditions in Macomb County provoked citizens to file complaints direct with the Governor at Lansing.

The Governor promptly summoned the prosecuting attorney and the sheriff. He notified them of the complaints, He instructed them to clean up Macomb County or else "drastic action" would be taken at once.

Another Billion Dollar Baby

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has release ed the minority report filed by Senator Walter H. White, Jr., of Maine, covering a resolution to ratify the agreement with Canada for completion of the St. Lawrence waterway and power project.

The Senator takes emphatic exception to the resolution. First, he contends, the Constitution requires ratification in the form of a treaty subject to approval by two-thirds of the Senate. If international agreements concerning matters of such great magnitude and cost may be approved by a mere majority vote of the two houses of Congress, it will divest the Senate of its treaty

Senator White is highly dubious of figures which estimate a total cost for the entire project of $619,500, 000. This estimate was based on 1939 and 1941 costs and omitted a number of necessary items including interest during construction, amortization, and expense of channel entrances. The Senator believes additional cost of completing the project would run it to $771,000,000—and that, if past expenditures of the United States and Canada are added, the total expense would be at least $936,000,000.

Of very great importance, Senator White questions the old claim that the American farmer would benefit from the project. Of the total grain crop raised annually in the 16 states tributary to the proposed waterway, he says, less than one-half of one percent is exported. Under normal conditions, the United States exports less than 21/2 percent as much grain as does Canada. In Senator White's words, "The benefit to any one farmer would be insignificant, but this flimsy bait has been dan gled before the farmer's eyes for over 25 years to obtain his support of the project."

founded on the sloping sides of the mountain from which rich ore was taken over a period of more than 60 years of mining, leaving the town dry from ore. The site preduced more than $600,000,000 in copper, silver and gold and will be abandoned next year. Businessmen plan to develop the area as a tourist center with dude ranches, resorts and private schools, so it will not be a ghost city.

The minority report makes other telling objections to the St. Lawrence proposal. They should be impartial. ### This new Engine Clean-up Program may be the one thing that will give it stamina for the final spurt You're probably seeing some new cars, these days. And they're mighty welcome to the eye. For their arrival means they're mighty welcome to the eye. For their arrival means your old one can be replaced in the reasonably near future. But this last stretch may be the hardest one of all. Chances are the engine is dirty. Sticky deposits, long accumulating in that old engine, may suddenly clog the oiling system—with disastrous results.

To meet the situation, your Standard Oil Dealer offers a new, economical, five-point Engine Clean-up Program. It includes the use of two remarkable new Standard Oil Products—Stano-Purge and Stano-Vim—which do an effective desaring tob without requiring axpensive dismantling of the

They had told her experience the second of the secon told her, as clearly as they could tell her, the futility of his sacrifice. She remembered what he had said to her. "If we win this war, you'll have your children. If we don't, you won't want them." "If we don't laugh," said Di "we'll all sit down and cry. We've got the mess they made." "Oh Dick," Julia admonished him,

"but really, this war is different!"
"Different? Tell that to the Marines. Sure, the Marines who got stuck on Wake Island with a lot of populars because the Japs such good customers and they might have got their feelings hurt if we'd fortified it."

"We're a swell bunch of suckers, aren't we?" said Cherry. "To get ourselves born in these times!"

"Well, we couldn't help it," Dick remarked, "But I guess nobody who had anything to say about it would have picked out the twentieth century, any of it."

Cherry gave a low ironic chuckle. "They'll have an easy time remembering the twentieth century when they study it in the history books. A pre-war period, a war, an inter-war period, another war, a

"No, you don't get it, Julia," said Dick. "I'm not as pessimistic as Pudge, I think the next infer-war period is going to be a lot longer than this last one, why it's got to; by the time the war is over every-thing will be blown to powder and there'll be nothing left to fight with. But we're a lot better off than those moony-faced laddies who went marching off full of molasses about the brotherhood of man and all that. We won't be distillusioned when it's over because we haven't got any il-lusions. We know it's all a bloody mess and we're in it because our elders didn't have sense enough to keep us out of it. We'll go into the army and they'll train us to be killers whose busines it is to shoot othe killers before they have a chance to shoot us first. And that's that," "But gosh, Dick!" Julia ex-claimed in a shocked voice. "We've got to fight! Don't you hate the Japs? "Of course I hate them. I'd like to wipe every one of their monkey faces off the earth. Oh, that's okay by me, I'll shoot 'em and be glad to do it. But that's not the idea. Just get this over, and the Russians will love the Chinese and the Chinese will love the British and the British, will love the Italians-Pudge interrupted, still chuckling, 'Just picture anybody actually loving the Italians." "Oh, but they will," Cherry as at seventeen. Oh yes, I know, thousured him cynically. "Haven't you sands of men have already been read some of these post-war plan-killed, but go ahead. What are you ners? Everybody is going to get long with everybody else, even the Spaniards.'

"The State Department," Dick re-minded her, "gets along beautifully with the Spaniards."

Now that Chamberlain is dead. said Cherry, "somebody really ought to send the State Departmen a lot of umbrellas for Christmas. Oh, it really does make you tired, doesn't it? Ever since I can remember, people have been talking not blame herself. Elizabeth thought about the next war, and nobody did anything about it except to go on selling the Japs and Germans things to blow us up with. And now that we're in it they're trying to hand us that same old fluff."

"I guess you're right," Julia admitted. "It's—shivery, isn't it?" Dick retorted, "It doesn't make sense except the way I said it the first time. The Japs and Germans say, 'We're going to kill you and take what you've got.' We say, 'Like hell you are.' So we get up and bang it out. We keep banging till they're so slugnutty they have to let "That's not the way it turned out last time," Julia reminded him.

"No it didn't," Dick agreed, "because last time everybody was so full of phony ideals and doubletalk. Why, to read this stuff we've been reading, you'd think the army was a lot of social workers sent out to upfor. No wonder they left everything in such a muddle. Nobod fought a war for any ideals.

"Why Dick there are some ideals in this war!" Julia protested. "You know, the Four Freedoms and all that."

Dick was too polite to contradict her at once, but Cherry was not. "Oh Julia," she said, "don't be so sentimental. You don't really lieve anybody in the United States cares whether the Croatians and people like that have any Four Free-doms, any more than they care about us. Nobody fights for anything ilke that. They just pretend they do while it's going on."

"She's right, Julia," Dick argued.
"What they really fight about is property and power. They always talk pretty while it's going on, and then when it's over they get realis-tic. But as soon as a new war starts tic. But as suon as a new war states they say, 'Oh yes, we know, all the other wars were fought for crass reasons, but this one's different,' boys, this one's different.' 'He be-came vehement. 'Well, this one's came vehement. "Well, this one's not different and I'm thankful we know it. I'm plenty tired of everybody pretending to believe what everybody knows isn't-true."
"I wonder what your mother and father would say," Julia suggested,

"if they could hear you talk like

"Oh, they wouldn't mind," said Cherry. "They're very intelligent people, really." "They've got some eld-fashioned ideas," said Dick, "like everybody their age, but generally speaking they're very liberal for older people They don't go around being always shocked about things."

Outside on the balcony, Elizabeth stood with her hands gripping the rail. She was thinking, "Every word they are saying is my fault, mine and Spratt's. They're our children and we taught them to think this way. Or at least, if we didn't teach them to be cynics, we didn't do my-thing to stop it. We ran away from the last war as fast as we could. In what Spratt called the world's bang-over, we didn't say anything but 'never again.' And now there's another war, and Dick will have to fight it—and listen to him! Is that how they all feel? If it is, their she knew she had been a coward and that she was still a coward. She had refused to face what was there, and she still lacked the courage to face it. Could she go into the house right now and say to Dick, This war is a glorious crusade, and you must get into it now. till next year? They will take you at seventeen. Oh yes, I know, thou killed, but go ahead. What are you waiting for? It's worth it."

No, she could not say it. If she believed this war was worth winning, that was what she ought to say, but the truth was that she simply not believe it that much. That what had held them all back during the accumulating horrors of the past twenty years. They knew what war was like, they could let anything happen in the world if only they could keep out of another. She need as though she was the only one. Turning around, she walked into the house, entering through a hall so as to avoid meeting the children in the den. With the disappearance of the sun the air had grown chilly of the sun the air had grown chilly.

A fire might be welcome. She stood by a window in the living room, looking at the darkness as it gathered swiftly over the lawn. A maid came in to turn on the lights.

"Don't you want me to draw those curtains too. Mrs. Herlong?" she sked.

Elizabeth turned. "Why yes, I'd forgotten them. I'll do this win-dow." She pulled the cord that drew the curtains together, and as the maid went out she turned from the window. How well-ordered ev-erything looked, and was. Nothing had happened this afternoon. Nothing had happened except within herself. Everything that had made her feel so strong and hanny as she still there. A voice in the doorway startled her. "Say, mother, we're getting famished. Isn't the boss home yet?' "Not yet, Dick. He's very busy picture.''-

"I know, but I'm starving."
"If the boss isn't here by seventhirty, we'll sit down without him," she promised. "It's getting cold, Dick, will you light the fire?"

"Sure will." Dick knelt down and applied a match to the gas rod under the logs. He glanced at the cocktail tray. "Want me to mix the Martinis?''

"I wish you would." "Okay." He went first to the door and called the others. "Want to and called the others. "Want to come in here? Fire going." "In a minute," Cherry called ack. "Got to wash our hands first those magazines were so awfully dusty. Is the boss in?" "Not yet, but mother says we can have dinner at seven-thirty anyway.

The gas fiame sparkled up to ig-nite the logs piled in the grate. Dick swished the gin and vermouth. Though he was not allowed to drink cocktails himself, he enjoyed the feeling of adulthood it gave him to play bartender. What a nice how he was, Elizabeth watched him. Dick asked,

"Like a drink now? He poured it out for her and

"Yery good, You could get a job."
"I'll be needing one if that physics guy gets much tougher. Oh hello there." he said as Cherry and th two others came in. They greeted Elizabeth, and Julia said,

"That fire looks wonderful.

our house, they start the fire with no trouble at all. You have just ev erything here, Mrs. Herlong."
"Why thank you, Julia."

"This is the most comfortable house I was ever in. We've been having such fun all afternoon."
"I'm getting weak in the middle," said Dick. "I wish you'd ordered some crackers or something."

'I'll have hors d'oeuvres tomorrow night. We're having a guest for dinner—I mean an older guest, from the studio." "We were all going to ride down to the beach tomorrow night," said Dick. "It'll be all right if Cherry and I leave right after dinner, wor

"For Cherry, but I'm sfraid there's another prospect for you."
"For me? What?" he asked in Elizabeth gave him an urgent smile. It was a relief to turn her attention to her ordinary day-by-day affairs, to observe her children as normal healthy youngsters hungry for their dinner, to reach for a ciga-rette and have both Dick and Pudge strike matches for her. She accepted the light from Pudge, and smiled across it at Dick as he blew out the match he had struck.

"Dick, our guest tomorrow night is a Mr. Kessler, from Germany. I've never met him, but he's working on the picture."

"Another refugee?" inquired

Cherry.
"Yes, but you'll both please remember not to call him that. Simply say, 'German,' if you have to call him anything."

"I get it," said Dick, "but what have I got to do about him?"
"He has a daughter—" "Oh my goshi"

"Our Sacred Trust"-or How to Live With the Atom

Here we are, halo shining, holding our sacred trust, the Atom Bomb. We made it. No other nation has any. But they needn't be afraid. We wouldn't hurt anyone.

But an atomic arms race is al-ready under way. Once a race starts you have to beat the other fellow even if it's the last thing you ever do—which it will be.

Our only hope is to turn this race into a race to save the world from the Atom Bomb. We must take the lead. In the long run what's best for all is best for us.

All nations must join together and pool their strength to enforce world control. This won't be easy to do but it must be done before the happy day here arrives.

needs of both sun

Effective August 15, 1946, the price of milk will be increased 2c

The reason for this is simply that the government has discontinued its milk subsidies to the dairy farmer. Instead of being paid through taxes, this subsidy must now be paid as you purchase milk.

Another factor governing the price of milk is that the cow population per acre in Crawford County is the smallest in the entire state of Michigan. For this reason not enough milk can be produced to supply Grayling and the surrounding Villages with Market Milk. For this same reason, no Butter, Cottage Cheese or other Dairy Products can be manufactured in Grayling. These products must wait until such a time as Dairy Farms are built up to supply the needs of our fast growing City.

The dairy industry, in its dual role as a business, and a public service, concurs with the desire to "hold the line" in prices; consequently the increased price of milk is NOT actually a price "rise," but merely a transfer of consumer payments from the INDIRECT to the DIRECT method.
